Valmiki Ramayana, as traditionally attributed to Valmiki, is a smṛiti text (also described as a Sanskrit epic) from ancient India, one of the two important epics of Hinduism known as the Itihasas, the other being the Mahabharata. The epic narrates the life of Rama, the seventh avatar of the Hindu deity Vishnu, who was a prince of fourteen-year exile to the forest urged by his father King Dasharatha, on the request of Valmiki's Ramayana inspired Sri Ramacharit Manas by Tulsidas in 1576, an epic in Awadhi Hindi with a slant more grounded in a different realm of Hindu literature, that of bhakti; it is an acknowledged masterpiece, popularly known as Tulsi-krita Ramayana. Gujarati poet Premanand wrote a version of the Ramayana in the 17th century.[citation needed] Akbar, the third Mughal Emperor, commissioned a simplified text of the Ramayana which he dedicated to his mother, Hamida Banu Begum. Created around 1594, the manuscript is illustrated with scenes from the narrative. [...] Kakawin Ramayana is believed to have been written in Central Java circa 870 AD during the reign of Mpu Sindok in the Mataram kingdom. The Javanese Kakawin Ramayana is not based on Valmiki's epic, which was then the most famous version of Rama's story, but based on Ravanavadha ("Ravanavadha (Bhattikavya)") or the "Ravana massacre," which is the sixth or seventh century poem by Indian poet Bhattikavya.

Valmiki was not the name that his parents chose for the poet. His real name was Ratnakara. The word 'Valmika' in Sanskrit means an ant-hill. His years spent in tapas (deep meditation) caused an ant-hill to grow around him. He came out of the ant-hill, and hence got the name of Valmiki.

The Ramayana, one of the Indian Epics was written by Maharishi Valmiki tells the story of King Ram and Sita. He is considered Adikavi "the first poet" as the first ever recorded shloka (verse) is written by him. The Valmiki Ramayana is dated around 500 BCE and is about 1/4 the size of The Mahabharata which is another traditional Indian epic and 4 times the length of Illiad, an ancient greek epic poem. A notification on my calendar synced with major Indian holidays, reminded me that today was Maharishi Valmiki Jayanti, or the birthday of a great saint called Valmiki who authored the Ramayana. [...] This struck me as fairly odd, as In the decade(s) that I have lived in India, a country which takes their festivals very seriously and also because Indian mythology has profound impact on religion art and culture in the Indian subcontinent and southeast Asia. Considering that Diwali, is the homecoming of King Rama who is the protagonist of the Ramayana and knowing Valmiki as the author of the Ramayana, which remains one of the largest works nay, an unparalleled gem in ancient world literature's crown, I don't ever recall knowing what Valmiki Jayanti was nor remember it being celebrated.

In retrospect I almost feel a bit betrayed that it was not, considering the literary and philosophical genius that he was.

From the seeds of this first shloka, Valmiki then composed the Ramayana in the same meter after being commanded to do so by the god Brahma. The Ramayana tells the story of Rama, a prince of Ayodhya described as the maryada purushottam (Sanskrit: “ideal man”). The epic contains 24,000 verses and is divided into seven kandas (sections or cantos). The Ramayana is a quarter of the length of the Mahabharata, the other ancient Sanskrit epic. Even so, the Ramayana is significantly longer than Greek epics such as the Iliad and the Odyssey composed by Homer.

Content: ## New Identity Of Ratnakar

This time Narada told Ratnakar, since he had been reborn from “Valmika” i.e. ant mound, his name would be known to the entire Trilok as “Maharshi Valmiki” from today and he would become the guide of other’s life from now on. It is mentionable here that the place where Maharshi Valmiki and Narada Muni met was named as Tapovan (located in Jhargram district of West Bengal, India)

Thus we all know the bandit Ratnakar as Maharshi Valmiki. I have already said that Maharshi Valmiki himself was the author of Ramayana. Today, he is best known for writing the world’s first epic (Ramayana).

Valmiki Ramayana

Ramayana is about the story of Lord Rama which Valmiki presented to the people in the epic form.

Valmiki was not the name that his parents chose for the poet. His real name was Ratnakara. The word 'Valmika' in Sanskrit means an ant-hill. His years spent in tapas (deep meditation) caused an ant-hill to grow around him. He came out of the ant-hill, and hence got the name of Valmiki.

A notification on my calendar synced with major Indian holidays, reminded me that today was Maharishi Valmiki Jayanti, or the birthday of a great saint called Valmiki who authored the Ramayana. [...] This struck me as fairly odd, as In the decade(s) that I have lived in India, a country which takes their festivals very seriously and also because Indian mythology has profound impact on religion art and culture in the Indian subcontinent and southeast Asia. Considering that Diwali, is the homecoming of King Rama who is the protagonist of the Ramayana and knowing Valmiki as the author of the Ramayana, which remains one of the largest works nay, an unparalleled gem in ancient world literature's crown, I don't ever recall knowing what Valmiki Jayanti was nor remember it being celebrated.

In retrospect I almost feel a bit betrayed that it was not, considering the literary and philosophical genius that he was.

From the seeds of this first shloka, Valmiki then composed the Ramayana in the same meter after being commanded to do so by the god Brahma. The Ramayana tells the story of Rama, a prince of Ayodhya described as the maryada purushottam (Sanskrit: “ideal man”). The epic contains 24,000 verses and is divided into seven kandas (sections or cantos). The Ramayana is a quarter of the length of the Mahabharata, the other ancient Sanskrit epic. Even so, the Ramayana is significantly longer than Greek epics such as the Iliad and the Odyssey composed by Homer.

This time Narada told Ratnakar, since he had been reborn from “Valmika” i.e. ant mound, his name would be known to the entire Trilok as “Maharshi Valmiki” from today and he would become the guide of other’s life from now on. It is mentionable here that the place where Maharshi Valmiki and Narada Muni met was named as Tapovan (located in Jhargram district of West Bengal, India)

Thus we all know the bandit Ratnakar as Maharshi Valmiki. I have already said that Maharshi Valmiki himself was the author of Ramayana. Today, he is best known for writing the world’s first epic (Ramayana).
